

Media Release

Dr Nikki Turner - Do the Right Thing

Dr Nikki Turner is once again being rolled out to do the government's bidding - or is it Pfizer's?

As the face of the safe-in-pregnancy campaign, once again she is spouting the "completely safe" mantra without any evidence whatsoever to back up her statements, while studiously ignoring not only the mounting evidence of harm but also the precautionary principle, never more important than for the smallest and most vulnerable.

We are talking about a four-month-old baby here. "It is not enough to say there is no evidence of harm" a spokesperson for New Zealand Doctors Speaking Out with Science (NZDSOS). "Even if there was no evidence either way, which is not the case, the 'absence of evidence' is not the same as 'evidence of absence'".

With increasing calls in New Zealand and across the world for un-vaccinated blood, it would surely behoove the authorities to stop and listen".

How much destruction will it take before our leaders, 'experts' and regulators have the courage to admit that what they have said may have done harm? The story of baby Will is now international news. Do Dr Nikki Turner and the rest of the covid cabal, including Corin Dann from RNZ, really want their names in headlines across the world for being part of the group that took a child away from its parents, who want nothing more than the best for him?

In essence, this is about parents' rights to choose what they feel is the absolute best care. They are seeking to improve on what the state can provide, in their view.

"We thought we had seen it all," the spokesperson said, "but the government continue to outdo themselves in one jaw-dropping action after the next."

What has happened to First Do No Harm? What has happened to protect the most vulnerable? Indeed, what has happened to democracy in New Zealand?

NZDSOS have looked at Dr Turner's interviews and the only way to describe her pronouncements is that we can drive a bus through them. We have drilled down into the detail and provided actual science, not to speak of raising the precautionary principle and the fundamentals of modern medicine. Read our report here.

All the reassurances we were all given, that NZDSOS have questioned from the start, have turned out to be little more than hopeful guesses in the service of Pfizer that are proving wrong, wrong, wrong! The jab does not stay in the arm for a start. It goes everywhere, and persists for months.

We once again call for a real debate and discussion, rather than entrenched views. As doctors, it is our duty to provide as much evidence as we can and, to the best of our abilities, take into account the wishes of the patient and/or their care-givers. It is Dr Nikki Turner's duty too.

NZ Blood screen for all manner of infectious diseases, have a stand-down period following other vaccines and do not allow donations from persons who may have been exposed to Mad Cow Disease 30 years ago. How is it that they can say so dogmatically that blood from vaccinated people is safe? The truth is they can't - or more likely won't. It is NZDSOS' position that it is possible to provide blood and blood products from un-vaccinated donors whose blood is screened in the usual manner anyway. Until recently, NZBlood provided support for directed donations. The supportive information has now been removed from their website.

Dr Nikki Turner must do the right thing. Just pause. Think about who you are as a doctor and as a parent. Think about what these parents are going through. The same goes for the rest of the team - at Starship and the New Zealand Blood Service. We urge you to look past your beliefs, pause, take a breath, listen to the parents and do the right thing.